

OFFICERS' MESS,

T LINES,

AVINGTON PARK CAMP,

WINCHESTER.

Oct. 31 1917

My dearest, It was the most lovely morning as I journeyed back - half moon-light & half dawn-glow as I started & as the sun came up dispersing the mist it was gloriously golden with brilliant flakes of pink cloud. It wasn't full daylight before I reached Farnham & after that I went through a good deal of thick ground mist.

WINCHESTER
AVINGTON PARK CAMP,
T LINES,
OFFICERS' MESS.

I was back here at 7.25 - an hour & a quarter in all, which was very good going under the conditions.

After all my inquiries of you of my servant here I was amazed & delighted to find here this morning my glasses & revolver! How my man succeeded in concealing them before I can't imagine. What a good thing I haven't already written to the battery!

No duties have presented themselves to-day. I shall go into Winton this afternoon & probably see the Courtneys again and the Jennings & fix up some arrangement for to-morrow when I must go & see Fifteens.

I'll probably despatch a parcel of books to you in a day or two - I'm preparing myself for a move.

Dear girl it has been a lovely

'week-end'. It can't be so very long in any case before we meet again.

Over your love
George.
