

Monday Dec 11

My own dearest

I do hope I shall soon have another letter from you to say that you are better or quite well. It must be horrid to be ill out there with no one to make you comfortable at all.

I have been down this evening to a Mothers meeting to hear about the mothers & baby welfare work that I want to do. Mrs Tate is getting it up a good deal & she says she will be glad of helpers so I think that's all right. I got to that meeting at eight & thought I should be home by nine but it was not over till about twenty past nine. I bicycled which is the best way of going about at night I think.

The two Fanshawe children came to tea today. Unfortunately Clare was not very bright this evening I think she was rather tired and that her teeth are worrying her again a little. I took her up to bed early & they watched her have her bath which they enjoyed very much.

They are nice children but Mary the elder one has her manners very much on her mind and Basil's too. He is all right till he gets excited and then I expect he is pretty unmanageable.

I had a letter from Robert Graves today. I wrote & told him that your leave was off & he says that all mine and leave is stopped in England and so he does not suppose he will be able to see you when you do come home. But he said he was waiting to see you.

I had a letter too from Mary Anne the other day. Did I tell you? A very nice one. She said you had said she could see your letter to me on relig ions education

I should like her to see it and should specially like to show it to her & talk about it to her. I wonder if that will be possible.

I am still reading & very interested in Raymond though it has not been getting on very fast the last day or two. I have not had much time for reading.

Good night dearest I must go to sleep now.

I have had such a happy night. You met me in dreams most beautifully. I was just walking up from the town when I saw you just in front & I ran to you & we just held one another close as we should. Then I was with you for some time enjoying being with you and enjoying your beauty just as I should. I don't remember very much talk but that's too much to to expect of a dream.

I heard yesterday that Constance Missens Maley, Renie has been ill. She has been to the sea for a week & came home quite well and then she was very sick, M^r Williams told Father that she looked awfully ill. They sent for a doctor & he said it was a chill, she is better now but it must have been very alarming.

She is going to have her second in March, lucky woman, & she hopes very much for a boy.

Mildroads blisters are still troubling her so she wont. come to Goldford today. I shall cycle if its not raining w. as not to go by train.

The train trouble is going to be very bad. Every one is asked not to travel for Christmas & we are afraid we shant get any Christmas visitors. We have written to my uncle Haines & Aunt Jessie to come because its the last time before they go to Trinidad that we shall see them. We think they can come long enough before hand for it not to count a Christmas travelling but I doubt if any of the others can come.

Bob will be all night because soldiers on leave are to come before any one.

I have had a letter from you this morning as very nice one. I am glad you are quite well again. I will answer it tomorrow. I have spent my time doing up a parcel of chocolates & brawn & apples to fill up. The first two only arrived here today Brigades have been very slow about sending them. It's a day too late for Christmas parcels but they may arrive in time.
I could not put in many apples because of the weight.

Your very loving Ruth.

I forgot to tell you that you were wearing shorts a flannel shirt & uniform cap & rucksack in my dream.
I mixed your different sides well up didn't I, and the uniform didn't act much.
