

[?12 May 1916] 40th Siege Battery, B.E.F.

My dearest Ruth, you may clap your hands for the present & sing songs in your batt., or anywhere else. As far as I can tell my fate is a good one. At least it is not what I feared - how shall I explain matters? As I got nearer to the front I held out for certain that the army to which I was sent was holding the west part of the line - & then this morning, for reasons which I can't explain it seemed likely that I might after all go to a French mortar battery. The prospect of writing to tell you that was too horrible.
I knew you would feel extremely anxious,
- right so. My darling I can't tell you all I thought; it wasn't for my own sake I really behaved, but I did feel afraid for you. And then it also came home to me with a sense of tragedy I haven't felt before that married men are out here mostly in the after world in the most dangerous circumstances. Well dear Ruth you are spared the worst of what those men will have to suffer & when you pray for me you can thank him for that.

What's more I feel I'm going to be happy. I'm in a safe harbor all right - not the safest guns, but big enough & in quite good general condition and safety - a small place & got lot of protection & a fast rate lit of men! I am living in a cottage at present with a good family but other hands as by comparison - isn't that sort of man one who has a genuine manly right minded, determined & keen in the work & very anxious to instruct me. I was brought round to his side by one Captain Little & friend then for a man dealing music & playing a flute. We

I went talked to Capt. yet; but it didn't say thing we wants in a man. More then half the men in this battery are Scotch, including the said Captain & at least one subaltern. Everyone I've met seems a Christian! I'm going to have lets to do. I only worked here after turning about the country mostly - A.S.C. wagons, at about 5 o'clock a.m. I've seen all around the place - & works on little shelter & every thing (of all tows) & we half expect to be busy to night.
There's some patrols in the trenches, & can hear before I sit very sharp in the infantry may call for help. I'll be prob'ly less convenient for you in a few days - This is the 1st we've had Noops - I'm going round present with will to see the guard - as the bds probably will clothes on; but that is not a frequent condition.

I'm afraid you'll have to be content with less than we should like of my goings-on correspondence, these next few days. You kindly have not had my letter from Paris, as I had to post it in another place & I'm told it will be detained, in consequence - & it stuff said that I hadn't yet had it from you or a 50 francs stamp to do for ~~so~~ ^{so} days yet. This is very trying. I do want to know what you have been thinking. I do not wish you keep a cheerful face. Not my fear love I must end. I shall think of you very happily to-night. Please send a line to Blaauw - I haven't managed to write to them since I left Haarle.

Yrs lovingly - Dorothea

With XXX etc as the Tomorrows part!
