

OFFICERS' MESS,

T LINES,

AVINGTON PARK CAMP,

WINCHESTER.

Sept. 13, 1917

My dearest Ruth

I had your letter this morning. I'm glad you are so patient. But I hope I shall find you happy with a baby when I arrive on Saturday. I'm not sure in point of fact when I may arrive - quite possibly on Friday evening, but more probably I think not; anyway by lunch on Saturday.

I dined with the Garbuths last night & made my over.

ture about the motorbike. I am to have it right enough - but I can't be sure exactly when nor do I feel supremely confident as to how far from trouble I may be when I come to mount a bribe the beast. I couldn't of course press for time; but early next week I have little doubt it will be at my disposal. It was an agreeable evening.
Garbutt is an old hand & wholly intelligent.

I called on the way, punctiliously, since I was within the week on the Caustreys & received a extended impression of their domain. The view was playing up & there's not much wrong with that; & the house I feel quite to have its charm & to be a success. Caustrey was in Mr Newton's office - have you heard of him? I dare say your father knows his name.

This has been a fairly busy day of odd jobs for me, as orderly officer. I was late for Early parade at 6.15 a.m. - I had trusted to my servant who did call me before 6.15. Unluckily an offensive creature, as I hear by reputation, the brigade adjutant looked up & reported my unpunctuality. But happily I was leniently treated in the matter by the o.c.

God my denials I feel inclined to reclaim when I think of letting you know often the horses are groomed & fed & watered. It seems rather a question of certain short intervals when they are immune from such attentions (good! I find this is a dry sheet of paper). But all the same it can't be said that an order of officers, who must allow nothing no item of such performances to escape his observation, has an arduous job; & he has, for the first time at all events, the interest of peeping his nose into the larder & kitchen.

My hand is cold from this last shell in the rain, & I'm afraid I'm writing more croakily than usual. I heard from David this morning & he referred to 'bad news or absence of news' about Geoffrey Jagg; I am feeling anxious about him.

The War Office letter you forwarded was sent from Cox & Co, answering my inquiry as to a second pip

- seemingly indicating that an announcement would appear in due course in the Gazette.

I must go to another little job now. Fare well David & love. Keep your heart up.
I know you will.

Your loving George
