

Manuscript 1166
October 31

Mr. Ligon Bulwer presents his Compliments to the Marchioness Wellesley, & gratefully to the indulgence, her Ladyship condescended to accord him, he has permitted himself to retain to the last some faint hope of having it in his power to prolong his stay at Dublin, & that he met arguments as would afford him the chance of waiting on the Marchioness Wellesley this Evening. He now finds however that he must resign that hope & reluctantly avail himself of her Ladyship's most obliging permission to waive the duty, & still the only of the pleasure & the honour of obeying her Ladyship's commands.

Mr. Ligon Bulwer respectfully hopes that this Excuse has received from his indisposition.
